Council house boost for bigger families

by Dick Townsend-Smith

WORK is underway to extend more council houses in the borough so they can be used to provide homes for larger families who are living in overcrowded accommodation.

The move is part of a four-year project funded by the South East London Housing Partnership, which in turn is funded by the Greater London Assembly. Four London boroughs are involved - Greenwich, Southwark, Lewisham and Bromley. Greenwich has completed work on 45 properties over the past three years.

This has mainly involved extending three-bedroom properties so that they have four or five bedrooms. Some houses that were converted for multi-occupancy in the past have been re-converted back into single dwellings in order to house severely overcrowded families.

The project is now in its fourth and last year, and Greenwich has been allocated £300,000 to spend. Work is already underway on houses in Eltham Palace Road, Littlemead and Woodcroft, all in Eltham, plus a house in Charlton Dene in Charlton. Another two houses are also earmarked for extensions.

Once completed the houses will be offered to large families who

In my opinionTask is to open

I'VE always been passionate about raising the educational aspirations of young people. I left school with relatively few qualifications and had to work really hard to gain the right experience and source the best support to take me into further and higher education, and then into my career as a design academic.

I knew what I wanted to do. Many young people don't. We should never take it for granted that young people have the opportunity or even the inclination to pursue the education or career path that's right for them. They need help from local authorities, businesses and education providers to open their minds to what's out there. The project Ravensbourne has just completed with Greenwich Council and Lend Lease is a brilliant example of this. Working together with local schools in Woolwich, we have opened the minds of 10-year-olds to potential careers in the design, construction and regeneration industries. It is never too early to start. Raising aspiration in adults however is more tricky. In the era of "cuts" and further predicted job losses, adult learning will become even more necessary to successful job hunting. Education minister David Willetts highlighted the importance of adult and community learning in the form of "pleasure" education. I agree to a point but this is only one area of importance, there is also the consideration that pleasure learning could lead to further study relating to employment and higher education. Adult education is a core part of our provision in Greenwich Digital Skills, a Greenwich Council funded sector skills initiative based at our new building at Greenwich Peninsula. We will be investing in developing digital skills for adult learners using state of the art facilities and staff expertise, which we hope will improve employability prospects even in these hard times. Meridian's life on the hospital waves

IT'S not just x-rays emanating from the Queen Elizabeth Hospital for the benefit of its patients. Meridian Radio is celebrating ten years of broadcasting for patients at the Woolwich hospital. There has been a radio service for hospitals in the borough since the 1960s through the Woolwich Hospitals Broadcasting Service. The current service moved to the hospital at the turn of the millennium and the station has recently changed its name to Meridian Radio to reflect the local area. With about 20 members, including presenters and those who help out behind the scenes, Meridian provides a free 24-hour service, seven days a week. The programmes are specially tailored for the audience and include a regular weekly requests show. And Meridian Radio is making new waves. Chairman Duncan Martin said: "There are plans to extend our live schedule and we will also be publishing a magazine to be distributed at the hospital, with all advertising funds being invested back into the station. We are also looking into possible application for a charity grant which would help push us to the next level." Everyone at Meridian is a volunteer, working out of their free time to improve the quality of life for patients at the hospital. If you want to help behind the mic or behind the scenes, call secretary Owen Proctor-Jackson on 075 2517 4347 or at meridianradio@hotmail.com

£700,000 worth of facilities for the whole community

AN Eltham school has opened its Olympic-standard training courts - and it's inviting the neighbourhood to share them.

St Thomas More RC secondary school in Footscray Road has worked closely with Greenwich Council to achieve its long-time aim of installing a fully-accessible state-of-the-art multi-purpose sports complex.

And headteacher Markus Ryan says the £700,000 dream would never have become reality without the encouragement of the borough - and a £50,000 contribution from Greenwich's London 2012 legacy funds.

There are football pitches with rebound walls and recessed goals; tennis and netball courts; a four-lane 60 metre hurdles training and sprint track, along with long jump and triple jump, as well as changing rooms for 60 athletes.

The complex, mostly funded by Lottery money, is built to Sport England standards, and reps from the UK Amateur Athletics Association have approved the project as a suitable training ground. The headteacher said: "I am passionate about sport, it helps to build character and it is fundamental to great team work. I am pleased to lead a school in the borough of Greenwich where the council puts such great store in its sports facilities for the whole community."

Cllr John Fahy, the council's cabinet member for culture

JUMPING TO IT: a student gets in some early practice and Olympics, said: "This is a delight. It's a very important facility, adding value to the sporting opportunities available to our young people both in the run-up to the London Games and beyond."

Eltham MP Clive Efford, who unveiled the plaque with Greenwich Mayor Barbara Barwick, told everyone: "It is a remarkable achievement in such a confined space!"

And he told students: "If there is one message I can give all of you it's 'Make the most of the opportunities that you have in school.'"

PE head Louisa Spurr told how staff previously had to teach both long jump and triple jump on crash-mats in the gym. Also, because the old sports pitch was on a slope, the hockey ball would roll down the playground!

Both 15-year-old St Thomas More Olivia Grez and her 16-year-old James Naylor, are pleased with the new sports courts. Both are keen members of Greenwich City Tennis Club that is based in Eltham Park South and won their Kent League in 2009.

Olivia, from Blackheath, told GT: "Hopefully, this facility will help me to improve my game because I will have the opportunity to practise more."

James, from Eltham, added: "I'll be able to play more often - and we can get on the courts here before school."

Turbine power for allotments group

by Dick Townsend-Smith

ALL powered up and ready to grow! A group of allotment holders are celebrating getting their own wind turbine up and running to power the lighting at their club shop and toilets.

Their success is the result of two years' hard work in organising, getting building and planning permission, and securing a £5,000 grant.

The Kidbrooke Park Allotments Association has more than 90 plot-holders on the site in Old Post Office Lane next to Thomas Tallis School - with another 50 people on the waiting list. It manages the allotments on behalf of Greenwich Council, which owns the land.

Alan Bartlett, the association's site and projects officer, told GT: "We have a toilet and a shop on the site where we sell fertilizer and seeds, but no mains power. Unless it was sunny outside, it meant it was gloomy inside and we were worried about accidents. So we wanted lighting and looked at different options, and decided on a wind turbine."

The group decided on the

model they wanted using the expertise of one of their members - a mechanical engineer - and got the necessary permissions from the council. They then applied for a grant from the Lottery's Awards for All scheme to finance the equipment, which was agreed, while association funds paid for consultancy fees.

The group got together earlier this year to dig a hole that was 1.2 metres square, using another member's skills as a mini-digger driver. During April the seven-metre-high turbine was put into position. It weighs 60 kilos, with fins that have an end-to-end wingspan of 1.5 metres. It generates 0.8 kilowatts, which goes directly into the batteries and stored. Apart from lighting the shop and toilet, it can also be used for charging power tools.

"Generating our own power was the only option," said Alan. "The nearest mains power supply is about 400 metres away, and it would have cost a fortune to have underground cabling installed."

"Our wind turbine is easy to service manually, and has a lifespan of up to 15 years. We thought it would be more cost-effective long term than solar panels. It will come into its own during the winter months or on dull days when there is not much light. It means our shop can be used all year round, and we can use it for meetings as well."

The association was due to have an official launch ceremony for the turbine at its annual barbecue on Saturday, July 17, which was also part-funded by the Lottery grant.

live in overcrowded accommodation, where typically up to nine people may be sharing a three-bedroom house. Cllr Steve Offord, the council's cabinet member for housing, told GT: "Tackling overcrowding is important because it means the families involved will have a better quality of life.

"We are fortunate to have grant funding to help us make these larger properties available. I have inspected several of the conversions and the standard of the work was very impressive."

Disbanding a wonderful team

COULD someone explain too me why the Greenwich palliative carers are being disbanded this coming September?

On Sunday, July 4, I was running on Blackheath to raise money for Race for Life. I bumped into one of the palliative carers who attended my mother until the day she lost her fight with cancer last October. We promised mum she would live with us till the end, not letting her go into hospital. The wonderful support the palliative team gave mum was second to none. Every day they made mum and her family feel special as if she was the only patient they had to look after, but in reality she was of course one of many in Greenwich needing their expert and loving care. Families who have seen their work at first hand will want to how a dedicated team of eight can be disbanded without explanation when the terminally sick cannot speak for themselves

Star Letter

Mrs. E. Back

• DURING the last five years the team has become established as a provider of support services to people at end of life stage and their families. We have been funding the council to provide the service and have reviewed the overall provision of palliative care services. NHS Greenwich has taken the decision to bring together a number of the smaller services providing palliative care as part of one larger extended service. It is believed that this will offer greater flexibility and value for money. While there may not be a council provided palliative care service, NHS Greenwich's intention is to continue to commission the range of care that the council provides within the new and extended services being planned, which will continue to support palliative care patients and their families in their own homes and additionally offer rapid response overnight nursing and care services.

Working to improve things

IN reply to Helen Ellis's letter 'My hospital concerns' (GT, February 13) - while we can't comment on this particular case, since the Queen Elizabeth Hospital joined up with other local hospitals last year to form South London Healthcare NHS Trust, improving the quality and safety and patient services has been the absolute priority.

In the past year, there have been significant improvements. There is much still to do and we are working hard to improve emergency care at the Queen Elizabeth, for example. The Trust now has one of the lowest infection rates for MRSA bloodstream infections in England, and this year there hasn't been a single case. From having higher than national average mortality rates, South London now has lower than average mortality rates. There has been a legal case in relation to the doctor named, and there are always lessons to be learned from cases like this. We had tried to avoid this escalating to the point that it did and the incidents surrounding the case took place prior to the establishment of South London Healthcare.

South London Healthcare NHS Trust

Why were these crossings removed?

I AM writing to enquire about the removal of two zebra crossings across the four-lane carriage way on the New Woolwich Ferry Approach. These crossing are an essential part of the continuation of the Thames Path in the Woolwich area and their removal now means there is no safe crossing for pedestrians and other Thames Path users in the nearby area.

You will know that the Thames Path is a popular route for many leisure activities including walkers, runners and cyclists. I believe that the crossing points were/are essential not only for the safety of the Thames Path users but also for the safety of the many locals who use the Woolwich Ferry for their daily commute. Could you please investigate whether these crossing points are going to return? If not, will Greenwich Council take action on behalf of local residents and Thames Path users for the return of these crossing points.

Helen Watson, Woolwich

• THE crossing in New Ferry Approach was installed by the GLC many years ago. The zebra crossing markings have been removed because they did not comply with current regulations as there were no belisha beacons and zig-zag road markings. It was therefore open to legal challenge. It was not practicable to install beacons and road markings as there are also traffic signals in and out of the Ferry car park. There can only be traffic signals or a zebra crossing. It is considered that the presence of traffic signals is sufficient for pedestrians to cross the road safely.

Road is more like a dump

LIVING on Red Barracks Road is like living in a dump. There is a car park outside our house, people just dump rubbish there - and around the corner there are bags of clothes, tin cans, also weeds, it's disgusting. When we have visitors to the house I don't know what they must think.

Bike to the future

Old stagers' nostalgic trip to Plumstead

by Dick
Townsend-Smith

AN historic return to Plumstead was made by AJS motorcycles to the site of their birthplace - the old AJS factory - on Sunday, July 4, some of the old timers having first left it more than 75 years ago.

The event was a celebration of 100 years of AJS motorcycles. About 400 bikes came along for it, including many members of the AJS and Matchless Owners Club who had ridden down from Wolverhampton, the original home of the AJS factory.

Fourteen bikes took part in demonstration runs, some dating from as early as 1913. They also included some of the finest AJS race machinery ever produced by the factory.

There were bikes from the Sammy Miller museum in New Milton, Hampshire, such as the grand Prix AJS supercharged V4, AJS Porcupine, and many other models, including the most successful of all, the AJS 7R. The demonstration runs were at close to racing speeds through the Woolwich Arsenal complex on a specially-prepared track, giving visitors a unique close-up experience of seeing these now rare racing machines in action so very close to where they were manufactured.

Motorcycle racing legends Sammy Miller and Colin Seeley were among many others who took part, bringing back many memories and sounds of yesteryear and a reminder of what was produced at Plumstead.

"We are very grateful to Sammy and Colin, who gave up their time to support the event," said club spokesman Roger Limb. "Our exhibition, called 'First To The Finish: 100 Years of AJS Motorcycles' will be open between Tuesday to Saturdays until 18 September at the Greenwich Heritage Centre in Artillery Square, Royal Arsenal.

Rotary route for students

A GROUP of budding entrepreneurs from Eltham Green secondary school joined with Woolwich Rotary Club to become the first school in the borough to set up an 'Interact' group. The group of young people, nominated by local Rotarians, became honorary members of the club to help worthy causes. Now, the Year 10 students have been formally welcomed to their first full Rotary meeting, which took place at Charlton Athletic's Valley. Woolwich Rotary president Keith Tuckley told GT: "I am very impressed with the work I have seen so far from the Interact Group and, if successful, we hope to sponsor more groups like these in the future." The Eltham Green students have managed to balance their GCSE work with supporting the Help for Haiti earthquake fund by raising £490, buying a shelter box for survivors of the disaster. The school's Interact president Rosie Bridgman-Castle said: "We're holding a planned Global Day that will include students dressed in traditional, national costume or in the colours of a National flag." Eltham Green headteacher Joan Pickering said: "It is such a great feeling to see students of Eltham Green making a positive change in the local and international community." Head of RE Sam Barbary has been a great supporter of their group at Eltham Green. He said: "The group is committed to giving their time for others. They're creating activities that make Eltham Green a fun and rewarding place to be while raising money for charities both large and small. "I am proud of the group and its achievements. They have encouraged others not to just think of themselves but to partake in community activities that help us all."

Tenants join estate make over days

by Hilary Bryan

FIFTEEN tons of waste was removed from two housing estates in a council-led clean up.

Tenants joined council workers and other local organisations for two joint action days as part of the Capital Clean Up campaign.

The workdays took place on July 1 and 7 and were arranged to encourage residents to make improvements to their local neighbourhoods.

The days involved Greenwich Council neighbourhood wardens, housing and enforcement officers and Cleansweep staff, along with police Safer Neighbourhoods Teams and the Probation Service's Community Payback Team.

Clean-up tasks included deep cleans of housing blocks and communal areas, gardening and weed removal, graffiti removal, litter picking, removing bulky waste, a survey of repairs and enforcing Dog Control Orders.

Six blocks of flats were given a deep clean on the Avery Hill Estate where three tons of bulky waste was removed along with ten fly tips. Council enforcement officers carried out fire safety checks, and inspected the tax and registration of abandoned vehicles while others issued four formal warnings for breach of Dog Control Orders.

BRUSH AND WASH UP: above council staff remove rubbish on the Abbey Wood estate, and clean a stairwell on the Avery Hill estate

Over on the Abbey Wood Estate 12 tons of bulky waste was retrieved and 34 fly tips removed. There was major weeding to paths along Bracondale Road, Brinburn Close and Blithdale Road while car park areas were weeded, swept and cleared of litter. Wardens patrolled the estate noting fire hazards, repairs and graffiti and carried out tenancy checks as well as giving advice and information to locals.

The clean-ups were the final two of four joint action days and followed events on the Barnfield Estate in May and the Flamstead and Caletock estates last month.

Over the four events a total of:

- 30 tons of bulky waste was removed and disposed of from the estates

- 57 fly tips were identified and removed

- Nine formal warnings were issued for breach of dog control orders

- 20 communal repairs were identified and reported.

The annual Capital Clean Up campaign which aims to improve the environment by encouraging people to volunteer for local projects and work alongside local authorities, agencies and voluntary groups.

The campaign, now in its fourth year, is supported by the London boroughs, the Greater London Authority, Keep Britain Tidy and the Met Police among others.

Cllr Maureen O' Mara, Greenwich Council's cabinet member for community safety and the environment, said: "These action days help to reinforce just how much pride local residents take in the areas in which they live. The estates were already in a good condition and the additional deep clean was on top of what the council normally do all year round.

"Ongoing exercises will help to make the borough cleaner, safer and greener and fit to host the Olympics in 2012."

Scope for a great donate

WOOLWICH town centre office and shop staff are the targets of a new charity campaign.

They're being asked to help out for the Great Donate - a new fundraising drive by the charity Scope. Under the scheme town centre workers are being asked to donate good quality clothes, shoes, handbags, books and household goods by bringing them to work. The items will then be collected by Scope staff for sale in local shops.

It's all part of a national Scope campaign to encourage other sources of stock alongside their usual doorstep collections. The Woolwich shop in Hare Street will be running a leaflet drop to promote the scheme over the weekend of July 24 and 25. Workers will be asked to bring their donations to work on Monday, July 26. Bags can be left outside Riverside House and in the reception area of Woolwich Town Hall where they'll be picked up by a Scope van.

Margaret Stone, who has managed the Woolwich shop for 21 years, said: "It's the first time we've done this and we think it's a good time as people tend to have a clear out before they go on holiday. Because of the recession people are not giving things away and we're short on stock but office people tend to have nice clothes so we're hoping for some good quality donations."

Wine investment scam warning

INVESTORS are being warned about a wine scam following complaints to Greenwich Council trading standards officers.

Investors were wooed by the prospect of making a big return by buying top quality wines after answering adverts in the financial sections of national newspapers.

After attending a special reception to hear about the wine investment opportunities, they hand over cheques on the promise of a wine delivery in a round 18 months. But the delivery never arrives and the scammers have long since disappeared.

A glossy reception was held in offices in Greenwich town centre last year. Since then trading standards have seen complaints come in from all over the country.

Since then the Greenwich team have been working with the Companies Investigation Branch (CIB), an executive branch of the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills which investigates companies that are causing concerns.

Now Greenwich Trading Standards are urging locals to do their own research into companies rather than relying on glossy brochures or flashy sales presentations.

They also advise investors to get independent advice from recognised experts such as trade associations or industry bodies.

- If you need advice, or want to report a scam, contact Greenwich Trading Standards through Consumer Direct, the government's national advice service on 08454 04 05 06 or visit www.consumerdirect.gov.uk

Enterprise board offers free advice and support to business start-ups

FREE expert advice and support is available to residents who are thinking of setting up their own business.

It's being offered by South East Enterprise (SEE) the business support agency that has been helping Greenwich residents to turn their entrepreneurial ideas into successful businesses for over 20 years.

The agency based in Burney Street, Greenwich, is providing a range of support services for residents wanting to start up their own businesses through funding from Greenwich Council.

The support includes a range of workshops and seminars which focus on every aspect of starting and running a new business from planning and funding to marketing and promotion. They're followed up by one-to-one support from dedicated advisers who provide impartial advice to individual entrepreneurs through each stage of their business's development.

SEE area director Jeremy Hedger said: "With the current uncertainties in the employment market many Greenwich residents are looking at the opportunities to gain financial independence by working for themselves but it's not an easy option and there are many pitfalls awaiting the novice entrepreneur."

"Government statistics show that businesses-owners who take expert advice, plan objectively and research their market before launch significantly improve their survival rate over the first critical 18 months of trading."

The programme of support will enable Greenwich residents to realise their entrepreneurial talents and capabilities, and locals who have been unemployed for more than three months could receive Jobseekers' Allowance of up to £50 per week from the government to help them through the first few months of trading.

Ramona Metcalfe launched a life coaching consultancy with support from SEE.

She said: "SEE are committed to helping all kinds of people to be successful in business. Their 'no-nonsense' approach and tendency to tell it how it is, provides clients with the clear facts so as to make informed decisions about the risks associated with their business."

Cllr Denise Hyland, the council's cabinet member for regeneration, enterprise and skills, said: "Small businesses are the heart of the local economy and start-ups provide the blood flow for new jobs. Many new businesses have benefited from the ongoing support of SEE and anyone who's contemplating going into business could look to SEE for support."

And she added: "This latest initiative demonstrates our commitment in supporting locals who want to explore the potential of starting their own business and our support means there is no charge for Greenwich residents."

Steve Nelson, Principal Director of SE London Chamber of Commerce said: "The chamber is pleased that the council is working with a wide range of business support agencies."

New DLR station plan

PLANS to develop the area above the DLR station in Woolwich are available for the public to see this week.

An exhibition takes place in the Tramshed at 51-53 Woolwich New Road on Thursday July 22, from 4pm to 8pm and on Friday July 23 from 3pm to 7pm. It will include details to develop the area over the station at 15-27 Woolwich New Road, 2-8 Spray Street. The proposals are being presented by developers Oakmayne Properties and Transport for London. They include plans for new shops, a 15-storey block of new homes and a 96-bedroom six-storey hotel. The exhibition is part of the developers' consultation before they submit a planning application to Greenwich Council and project staff will be on hand to record visitors' comments. For further information contact DP9 Planning Consultants on 020 7004 1700.

400 sign up for new online surveys

MORE than 400 people have already signed up for the council's new online consultation panel. They'll be invited to take part in online surveys and discussion forums, and occasionally telephone surveys or face-to-face consultation groups. Panel members can give their feedback voluntarily from the comfort of their own homes. Their views will be used to help improve public services in the area. And their names will be entered into a monthly prize draw to win a shopping voucher for a store of their choice. Many of those who are registered signed up to become panel members at the Great Get Togethers. The panel was officially launched at the Charlton Great Get Together. To sign up you can call 020 8921 5077 or visit www.greenwich.gov.uk/haveyoursay

● Freshly-made strawberry smoothies and salads from a farmer's market helped to keep the crowds cool at the Charlton Great Get Together. Sizzling heat attracted 7,500 visitors to Charlton Park for a day of fun, music and entertainment on July 10.

The event, held a day before the World Cup football final, featured lots of footie-themed activities including Charlton Athletic's inflatable football pitch. A 200-strong choir of local residents and school children took to the big stage with the Mbawula Big Band and students from Trinity College of Music for performances of South African township music. The event was the last of this summer's three Great Get Together events organised by Greenwich Council. They were a chance for residents to learn about council services and to give their views and concerns about local issues, as they enjoyed free activities.

Pupils show their joy in the green space all around them

PUPILS from four primary schools impressed competition judges with the power of their observations on the "common they love".

The 'What I Love About My Common' competition was devised by the Plumstead Common Environment Group, encouraging the children to express what was so special about the common on their doorstep.

Entries came from Timbercroft, South Rise, Nightingale and St Margaret's primary schools with drawings from the infants, and pieces of expressive writing from the juniors.

All the entries went on display in the main entrance of Woolwich Town Hall, including the making snow angels, racing up steps, feeling a worm, and hearing foxes. Wonderful artwork included monster trees, picnics, kites and dogs.

NATURE IN COMMON: pupils from Timbercroft primary school with their certificates

The judges were delighted by how much the children had really observed and thought about their natural surroundings, and how the older children were able to express why they valued the green space they see every day. Sarah Van Gogh, the PCEG member who suggested the idea of a competition, said: "I hope we can make it an annual event. It's a great chance for PCEG to support local efforts that foster an appreciation of Plumstead Common, and an awareness of how we can all care for and benefit from it."

Nick Day, who chairs PCEG, added: "Ever since I was greeted with the remark 'I don't like Nature - it's dirty', I have been acutely conscious of our obligation to better enable children to see themselves as partners and stakeholders in the world around them. The green spaces of Greenwich offer so many ways to help generate a sense of value and responsibility.

"In working with the council in the care and development of Plumstead Common, we are conscious of a serious obligation to encourage use and enjoyment of our green spaces by young people.

"We want to encourage and promote natural space where children can play safely and also find how fascinating the world around them can be. The 'Forest Schools' and 'Schools in the Parks' programmes that are being taken up by many teachers around Greenwich offer a chance for children to take part in structured activities in beautiful and inspiring green spaces."

MAYOR of Greenwich Barbara Barwick was at the Charlton Park Riding School for the Disabled on July 5 to welcome new pony Teddy, purchased with funds raised by local volunteers from the Westcombe Society.

Members of the Woolwich and Greenwich Rotary Clubs, long-term supporters of the association, also attended with parents of children who had rides on Teddy and old stagers Minstral and Honey.

HERO'S MEDAL FOR FIREPOWER

THE Conspicuous Gallantry Cross awarded earlier this year to Lance Bombardier Gary Prout, Royal Artillery, was presented to Firepower, The Royal Artillery Museum on Friday at the Ministry of Defence.

The medal will be presented by Lance Bombardier Prout to Major General R. L. Barrons CBE, chairman of Firepower, who plan to display the rare gallantry award at the museum on the Royal Arsenal. Lance Bombardier Prout was awarded the medal for risking his life in 2009 by attempting to save the life of one of his colleagues under intense enemy fire in Afghanistan. Lance Bombardier Prout was tasked to patrol and probe the Taliban's forward defences in one of the most dangerous areas.

Tickets to see The Sounds of the Glenn Miller Era

THE big band sound of the 1940s will feature in a spectacular West End concert to mark the 70th anniversary of the Battle of Britain and the Blitz.

Staring the Nick Ross Orchestra, the show will feature the sounds of the great swing era of the 40s showcasing outstanding instrumentals and vocal performances.

With a full line-up of saxophones, trumpets, trombones, a rhythm section and top singers, the Nick Ross Orchestra will faithfully recreate the wonderful sounds of the Big Bands led by the likes of Glenn Miller, Count Basie, Harry James and Tommy Dorsey.

Through such numbers as

'Moonlight Serenade', 'In the Mood', 'A String of Pearls', 'Begin the Beguine' and 'A Nightingale Sang in Berkeley Square' memories of London in the Blitz will come flooding back to life. The music will span almost all the emotions of those difficult times: comradeship, doubt, fear, loss and, most significantly, the hope in love. There have been times in history when composers and musicians seemed to be born to the occasion - none more so than the inimitable Glenn Miller who not only felt instinctively for the mood of the time but almost single-handedly created the spirit with which the public faced it. The concert is on for one night only at Her Majesty's Theatre, Haymarket, on Sunday October 3 at 5.30pm Box Office 0844 412 4657.

GT has four pairs of tickets to the show to give away. All you have to do is send your name, address and contact telephone number to Glenn Miller competition, Greenwich Time, Woolwich Town Hall, Wellington Street, Woolwich SE18 6PW or email competitions@greenwich.gov.uk Entries must be received by August 3 and will be picked at random.

Fighting talk

Eltham pupils win London debating challenge

CROWN Woods pupils proved they have the gift of the gab by winning a London-wide debating challenge earlier this month.

Three Year 10 pupils from the Eltham comprehensive won the final of the London Debate Challenge on July 1.

The event was organised by the English Speaking Union, an international educational charity, and involved dozens of schools from each of the London boroughs.

Crown Woods beat a team from Pimlico Academy in a heated final debate about punishing the parents of truanting children.

The Crown Woods team included Deren Mehmet, 14, and 15 year-olds Nadine James and Taylor Ryan, who will have their names engraved on the challenge trophy.

Speakers were also given marks for their individual speeches and the Crown Woods team was the only school to have more than one speaker in the top five with Deren and Taylor winning fifth and second place.

Their performances impressed all round and the pupils from the school in Riefield Road were offered a free place at a summer debating school and they've been invited to try out for the England Debating team in October.

BEST IN THE CAPITAL: winning team members Nadine, Taylor and Deren celebrate their success

"I'm over the moon - words can't describe how happy I am," said Deren who was unusually stuck for words.

"My favourite subject is citizenship because we are constantly debating. I love getting my point across and that depends on the way you present your argument - not on luck or anything else but on how hard you try," explained the 14-year old GCSE student who wants to be a politician in the future.

Sarah Jones, the school's head of citizenship and school debating coach, said: "I am exceptionally proud of all of the debaters; they've worked so hard this year and deserve their success. They have spent the year being beaten by sixth formers from some of the top independent schools in the country, and are now beginning to believe me when I say that debating is a place where state school students belong, and can succeed. I can't wait to see how well they're going to do next year!"

Cool show on the Big Screen

WOOLWICH'S big screen has a special showing to mark the two-year countdown to the London 2012 Olympic Games.

The 25 sq meter screen in General Gordon Square will be giving a free showing of Cool Runnings on Saturday, July 24. The 98-minute movie starts at 5pm and tells the story of the Jamaican bobsled team that competed in the 1988 Winter Olympics.

The free screening is a joint venture between Greenwich Council and the London Organising Committee for the Olympic and Paralympic Games. It is the latest event at the big screen which will be broadcasting local and national news, sport and entertainment events over the next two years as well as live coverage of the Games in 2012.

● For further details of forthcoming screenings visit www.greenwich.gov.uk/bigscreen

Stay safe in the sun

FRIENDLY suncare mascot, 'Sunshine Sam', from the Boots store at Greenwich Shopping Park in Charlton, brought a ray of sunshine to Woodhill Primary School children. The mascot visited the Woolwich School along with two Suncare consultants to teach children about staying safe in the summer sun. Over 150 Year 3 to 6 pupils, aged 7 and 11, took part in an interactive workshop where they helped read The Sunshine Sam Safety in the Sun story book. Free packs of Soltan sun cream were also handed out to keep youngsters safe in the sun for their annual sports days. Visit www.greenwichshoppingpark.com for more information.

Foot tunnel closures

GREENWICH foot tunnel will be closed on weekday nights to allow refurbishment works. The tunnel will close from 9pm to 6am the following morning from Monday to Friday starting on Monday, July 26. On the north entrance of the tunnel, the lift will be operating through the night to enable works to the stairs.

A Thames Clipper service is available during the affected dates until 1am, offering a crossing for pedestrians and cyclists between Masthouse Terrace Pier in the Isle of Dogs and Greenwich Pier in Cutty Sark Gardens. A pre-recorded update message is available on 020 8853 2988. For further enquiries, please call 020 8921 5577 during office hours.

Go on... Get Active in the Park!

YOUR chance - young, old or in between - to celebrate two years to go until London 2012

JUMP on a bus, catch a train, use the DLR - or, better still, Shanks's pony if you can to get to Greenwich Park on Saturday, July 24, for Greenwich Council's 'Get Active in the Park', the fitness and sporting way to celebrate the two-year mark until the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games come to Greenwich. It's the perfect opportunity for everyone to try out a new sport for FREE.

From 11am until 4pm, there will be a wide range of sports to try out. Check the list and make a note of one you fancy:

Athletics, badminton, cycling, football, gymnastics, Judo, short tennis, table tennis, trampolining, fencing, Tae Kwon-do and volleyball.

Inclusive sports such as new-age curling, sitting volleyball and polybat will also be on offer, so there's something for everyone.

In 2012, Greenwich Park will be hosting the equestrian events - including jumping, dressage, eventing, paralympic equestrian and parts of the modern pentathlon. So it's only appropriate that the day's activities will include pony rides.

The Greenwich Community Games (GCG) team will be in the park demonstrating different sports people can get involved with in their community. The GCG programme is a year-round project which aims to transform people's lives through sports-based activities.

In addition to all this, one of the day's main attractions will be the CARE (Charlton Athletic Race Equality) Unity Cup Football tournament.

Cllr John Fahy, cabinet member for culture and Olympics, told GT: "The Olympic and Paralympic Games is a great way to inspire people to get more active and try out new sports - and Greenwich Park is an inspiring location.

"Sportsmen and women will be competing here in 2012 to set new records, watched by billions of people around the world. This is a chance for Greenwich residents to join in, try something new and be inspired."

'Games Time'

GREENWICH is hosting no fewer than 34 of the London 2012 events. The Royal Artillery Barracks at Woolwich will be the venue for the shooting and paralympic archery events, and at The O2 - which will be known as the North Greenwich Arena during the Games - there will be artistic gymnastics, basketball, trampoline and paralympic basketball.

As part of the day's celebrations on Saturday, people will be able to find out more about what is happening in Greenwich during 'Games Time'.

'This is a chance for

FREE FOR EVERYONE: just some of the fun and games at last year's Get Active in the Park event

Greenwich residents to be inspired'

Greenwich Council's Choice Based Lettings Scheme

Edition 194

How the lettings policy works

Housing applicants are placed within 'Bands' according to the Council's policy for letting homes. Your band information is on the letter that the Council sent you when you registered, or when your circumstances changed.

Property adverts say which band can apply and any other criteria. When all the bids are received, the property is then offered to:

For properties advertised for band A and band B - the applicant who has had this priority status for the longest time.

For properties advertised for band C applicants - the applicant who has been registered on the Council's list for the longest time.

Band

- A is for applicants in unsatisfactory housing, including people moving due to demolition and those underoccupying their homes.
- B is for applicants the council must prioritise according to the law, particularly homeless people, and others with an urgent need to move for medical or welfare reasons.
- C is for all applicants on the housing register, including those that are in priority bands A and B.

How do I apply?

1 Get on the list

First, you've got to be on the housing waiting list to join the scheme. If you're not, get an application form by phoning the Access and Allocations Section on 020 8921 2941. Or pick up a form from any neighbourhood office.

2 Find your applicant number

It will be on the letter you've already had from the Council about the new scheme. You'll need that number and the reference number of the property you're after, which will be on the advert.

3 Pick out your ideal property

by looking in Greenwich Time or regularly checking the website:

www.greenwich.gov.uk/homes

Click on your preference on the website. If you don't have a computer, you can always use one for free in either your neighbourhood housing office, library or UK Online centre.

4 Apply in one of two ways

- Phone the 24-hour hotline 020 8921 4340. It's an automatic push-button system and calls will be charged at the normal local rate, or
- Via the Council's website

Indie-rockers Athlete get set for their appearance at The Greenwich Festivals: Summer Sessions this weekend

GETTING A HEAD START:
Athlete play the final day of the Summer Sessions on July 25

THE Summer Sessions kick off tomorrow, (July 21), beginning a four-day indulgence of music at the Old Royal Naval College. The Sessions run until July 25 (excluding 24th), and Scene caught up with headliners Athlete for a chat. The band top the bill on the final day, Sunday, and frontman Joel Potts told us: "The gig will actually be our biggest south London show for a long time. "We're bringing out a singles collection because we're been going for ten years now, and this festival is the perfect thing to go along with that." The band began life on Deptford High Street in 1999, rehearsing at the Bear pub, (now closed), but the lads still spend a lot of time in the area. Drummer Stephen Roberts said: "We know the area well - our studio is in between Greenwich and Deptford, and I live at Deptford Bridge. I think it will be the closest gig we've ever played to home - it'll be a light stroll home at the end of the night!" Best known for the song Wires - the haunting ode to Potts' daughter's troubled birth, and the more upbeat, You Got The Style, the band's new compilation includes all of their singles to date. It's released later in the year, and the boys will be bringing out all the crowd pleasers for the homecoming gig. "We're going to play our greatest hits!" quipped singer Joel, before sticksman Stephen added that there is also a previously unreleased bonus track on the upcoming 'best of' album. "It's actually the first song we ever recorded, but when we signed the record deal, the record company didn't like it so it never came out, but we always really liked it. So now we've dug it out - it's called Backtrack." The four-piece were nominated for the Mercury Music prize for debut album Vehicles and Animals in 2003, and won an Ivor Novello songwriting award for Wires back in 2005. So how has Athlete changed over the decade they've been together?

"We've gone through lots of different phases I suppose," mused the drummer. "We've

We're bringing out a singles collection and this is the perfect thing to go with it dipped our feet in and out of whatever we were feeling at the time. The bands I've always looked up to are the ones that you don't know what they're going to do next. "It's hard to choose a proudest moment over that time," he added - "there's the really obvious ones like winning the Ivor Novello, but I was more proud of the track and what it meant to people than actually winning the award. "We also supported U2 at Twickenham, which was pretty bizarre. The day before I was just sitting at my drums in our little studio, and the next day we were playing in front of 80,000 people." Also headlining the music festival are folk-punks The Levellers, with the darling of folk, Seth Lakeman on July 21; the Royal Philharmonic Concert Orchestra top the bill on Thursday July 22, and on July 23, it's Jools Holland and his Rhythm and Blues Orchestra, featuring Gilson Lavis and special guests Alison Moyet, Ruby Turner and Louise Marshall along with just announced local legend, guitarist Arthur Lee.

Tickets cost between £22.50 and £32.50 depending on the day. For more info and to buy tickets visit www.greenwich.gov.uk/festivals or call 0844 847 2439

Heal the world

Composer goes global

A PAIR of musical Greenwich market traders have appeared on an album which has been released worldwide.

Composer Kate Jaconello had two of her songs selected for the compilation, Healing Music From Around The World, and singer Louise Hatch joined Kate on vocal duties for the tracks, Serenity, and Wisdom, on Volume 1 of what will be a series of releases.

Kate told us: "The plan is that there will be seven volumes, which is really exciting - and I've already been asked if I will be the composer on all of the volumes."

The breakthrough for the musician came on a social networking website. Kate added: "There is a lot of negativity around social networking sites, but for me it's been amazing, and for me it all came through myspace. My site had a lot of hits and then a lady contacted myself and Louise, and that was the start of a really lovely working relationship."

The lady was American composer and string-puller, Janet Phillips who also has two songs on the 12-track compilation.

"That was just over a year ago. I'd already written Serenity - which Janet had indicated she liked, and Wisdom came out afterwards."

"She's already suggested two of my other tracks for Volume two." As well as from the USA, other offerings on Volume one come from France, Germany, Netherlands, Sweden and Spain.

Healing music is a genre in its own right, and compositions are generally slow paced with plenty of atmosphere. "The music's quite majestic," offered Kate. "It's filmic, and people have said it fits in the Healing category, but to be completely honest I'd never have put myself in that category."

"I wrote a piece of music for a friend who had cancer and sadly died a little while ago. It was played at her funeral and a lot of people have asked about the music since. It's warming music." Kate has lived in Greenwich for 12 years and loves the area and says she is "touched that she was chosen for the album, because I'm quite an emotional person."

There are shades of Enya to the music, admits Kate, which she says is credit to pal Louise's strong voice.

Enya is the obvious comparison - because of the vocals, although some of my music doesn't have singing in it. I've got a solo album coming out soon too." Pick up the album on Kate's website, www.katejaconello.com or from her market jewellery stall Shine, which is at the covered market every Saturday and Sunday.

Explosive entertainment with interactive game this Saturday

AN interactive game takes place in Woolwich this Saturday, July 24. Exploding Places takes participants on a journey through time and space, arriving in a fictional Woolwich, before players create their own community in the real world. Over the course of an hour the community travels through 120 years of local and global history, the idea being to build the strongest community to deal with the First World War and other catastrophes. It's basically a real world SIM City or Monopoly, played live on the streets of Woolwich on mobile phone screens and through headphones. Players must first register to take part.

To register call 020 8858 2825 or Email anna@streamarts.org.uk

Once registered, players meet at The Tramshed, 51 - 53 Woolwich New Road, SE18 6ES, on Saturday July 24. Runs from 11am-5pm. For more info about the game @ www.explodingplaces.org

FINAL SCENE

Popstar to Filmstar...

RUMOUR has it that Madonna is set for a big-screen comeback.

The project - for which filming has already begun, is the story of an affair between Edward VIII and American divorcee Wallis Simpson, and the king's subsequent abdication from the throne.

It's intriguing subject matter for the material girl to tackle, especially given the potential pitfalls of an American take on such a quintessentially English topic. But it isn't the queen of pop's first venture in to the world of film. In 2008 she made her directorial debut with Filth and Wisdom - a London based drama which was roundly slammed, particularly by English critics - and during the 80s and 90s she starred in a number of movies including Desperately Seeking Susan and Who Framed Roger Rabbit.

Of course Madge isn't the first - numerous members of Rock Royalty have dipped their toes in to the world of the silver screen, some fully immersing themselves in the hot springs of Hollywood. The standard was set in the 1950s and 60s with the money spinning franchise embarked upon by the two biggest acts in pop history: Elvis and The Beatles. While the Fab Four were applauded for Hard Day's Night and Yellow Submarine - flicks still considered classics today, The King was derided for a plethora of lack lustre and generic efforts which were churned out to turn a quick buck for the movie studios and management companies alike.

Since then the cream of rock and pop have fallen over themselves to straddle the dual worlds of music and film, from biopics like

Eminem's 8 Mile to the more absurd star turns. All too frequently a vehicle to flex bulging egos, these projects are often destined for a critical thrashing before they're even finished. Among the more bizarre castings was Mick Jagger in 1970, as the Australian outlaw Ned Kelly, whose Jamaican-meets-Irish outback accent was only matched for ridiculousness by the chinstrap beard he donned for the eponymously titled movie. There are few prizes for guessing that it was widely panned by critics and ignored by the public, but it didn't stop the Stones frontman from pouting and strutting his way through a host of movies in the 70s and 80s.

OUTLAWED: Jagger as Ned

Of course there are always exceptions to the rule, and while it may not have smashed the box office, Labyrinth - the 1986 fantasy starring David Bowie as the baby snatching Goblin King Jared, has established itself as a cult classic and made fantasy a genre that could be enjoyed by adults and children alike. But in the main - and given the potential minefield that musicians face when attempting to traverse these boundaries - music and movies are two worlds that ne'er should meet.

Material World

Film set in Africa is powerful and thought provoking

ORIGINAL PIRATE MATERIAL: the Vial family own plantation

WHITE MATERIAL is an intense but interesting perspective from French Director, Claire Denis on the effects of colonialism on a war-torn but unnamed country in the heart of Africa.

We are quickly thrust into the daily lives of the Vial family - white, coffee plantation owners from France, and their interaction with the local black community and the labourers they hire to harvest the coffee. We are shown the imminent breakdown of society; armed bandits wandering the land extorting and intimidating; orphaned children building child armies, and a ruthless army struggling to regain power.

At the heart of the plantation is Maria Vial (Isabelle Huppert), daughter of owner, Henri (Michel Subor). Tireless in her efforts to harvest her crop, she simply refuses to acknowledge the collapse of her world. Pillaging armed bandits are dismissed as "looking for food"; the flight of her own workers is seen as disloyal, and her own son's increasingly disruptive behaviour is met with disbelief and incredulity. Ignoring the pleas of her ex-husband - and advice of her embassy - to abandon the plantation and return to France, she struggles on, increasingly isolated. Obsessed with her land, the harvest and with her appearance, she fails to notice that her personal life has become equally devastated. She can no longer communicate with her by now, semi-psychotic son Manuel, (Nicolas Duvauchelle), and has become totally estranged from the ex, Andre (Christophe Lambert). And then there is her father, who she has never understood. Almost from the start we reject Maria and her lifestyle, from the relentless pursuit of the illusory harvest to the treatment of her workers she simply refuses to compromise to the land, to the people, and even to her family. Huppert is excellent, the archetypal colonial. Haughty and arrogant with an innate refusal for self examination - "I don't want to talk about my son," she says on multiple occasions. More could perhaps have been made of Lambert, who shows only touches of his potential and equally Duvauchelle, whose dialogue is limited but whose collapse into madness is powerfully compelling. Similarly, the arrival of a wounded but popular rebel known as 'The Boxer' (Isaach de Bankole) is underexplored, but make no mistake - this is Huppert's film from start to finish.

Director Claire Denis, better known for Chocolat (1988), unfolds events retrospectively, interrupting the timeline with numerous flashbacks distinguishable only via Maria's ever-changing wardrobe. It's a setting close to the director's heart - Denis grew up in Cameroon as the daughter of a French civil servant - and she treats her material knowledgeably, exploiting the sounds and sights of the African continent particularly well.

Verdict:

Interesting and thought-provoking. 6/10

Doing the locomotion again

KYLIE MINOGUE'S first studio album in three years, Aphrodite, has a lot riding on its success. Her previous LP 'X', although a hit, suffered underwhelming sales, which led many to question whether Kylie's crown as the princess of pop was slipping. Thankfully Aphrodite has returned her to the top of the chart and confirms why the public fell in love with the diminutive Aussie in the first place.

The album opens with lead single All the Lovers, a soaring slice of anthemic electro pop that builds layer upon layer of sound until it reaches its euphoric climax. Future single Get out Of My Way follows, and has all of the ingredients of a sure-fire floor-filler. Both carefree and extremely catchy, it's pretty much guaranteed to be the soundtrack to the summer. The rest of the album continues in the same vein, with the hard edged pulsing electronica of Closer and the feisty title track maintaining the pace. Only Everything Is Beautiful momentarily brings the tempo down. With its atmospheric vibe and syrupy vocals, it's the lone mid-tempo track on what is otherwise a high-octane album. As a result, a harsher critic might argue that the album is a touch repetitive and lacks variety, but Kylie is clearly sticking to a formula that works for her. And why fix what isn't broken?

Aphrodite has no pretensions of grandeur - it's an undeniably lightweight dance pop album. If you are looking for ironic lyrics and serious social commentary, you will be sorely disappointed. And therein lies the album's greatest appeal. In a time when the music industry is heavily influenced by the arty indie set, music is taking itself very seriously indeed. Aphrodite is an antidote to all that - it's shamelessly fun. It has no message and no chips on its shoulder. It's a high energy electronic pop LP designed to get you up on your feet and keep you there. As Kylie sings on Better than Today: "What's the point in living, if you don't wanna dance?"

Kylie is back. And so, it would seem, is unpretentious pop music. Thank Aphrodite for that!

Get ready for 3D TV

Forget about high definition – the future's in 3D, says Alex Brooks

'HD Ready'. It has been a few years since those immortal words entered the vocabulary of TV-lovers nationwide, a term which quickly became a buzz word for signifying that a TV would be capable of displaying High Definition channels in the future.

The issue was further confused by the addition of the term 'Full HD Ready' soon after, but confusion between HD and Full HD aside, the system worked well. These days there isn't a TV out there that isn't HD Ready, and the sources for HD content are plenty, whether it be the popular Sky HD service, Blu-ray's output, Freesat, or cable.

Now it's else to enable the 3D readiness. This is true – in fact, probably more so than with the HD malarkey, and though you can pick up a decent HD TV for around £500, 3D TVs have shot back up to £1,200. And this is not just the normal 3D that you've seen in the cinema, oh no – you need fancy glasses to watch 3D broadcasts – not cheap either, at £80 each. On top of that, you still haven't bought the hardware needed to utilise the 3D content available. The newest 3D TVs by Samsung do have one trick up their sleeves to ease the pain a little

READY FOR TAKE-OFF:
3D could revolutionise viewing

those with Sky will probably have heard that the broadcaster has run some samples in the past and will launch a dedicated channel later in 2010. There is of course at least one more niggle, and it's the same story all over again. Think Blu-Ray and HD-DVD; DVD and Laserdisc; VHS and Betamax: we don't have a format battle this time, but there is no standard for the type of glasses to use to watch the 3D content. It's currently between 'passive' and 'active' glasses, the former costing roughly £1, the latter £70 plus. The difference is in how they trick the eye into seeing 3D: The more expensive glasses use infra-red data from the TV to block vision from each eye while alternating the frames on the TV, whereas the passive glasses – like those used in the cinema – utilise polarised lenses to create the effect. As you'd expect, Samsung, Sony, Panasonic and LG are all peddling the expensive glasses. What a surprise.

RETROSPECTIVE:
3D technology has come along way since its inception happening again, only this time we're '3D Ready'. We could of course assume we know exactly what this means: Purchase a TV in the full knowledge that in the future we'll have to buy something though, an item hidden in a menu called '2D to 3D' converts any standard 2D broadcast to 3D. The results aren't amazing, it's a bit like those DVD players that 'upscale' to HD – effectively a stopgap. Sources for 3D content are available and will become more prevalent pretty quickly –

Wax on at the cinema?

Kid gets the chop

THIS retelling of The Karate Kid stars Jaden Smith as Dre Parker, a 12-year-old whose mother's new job takes him from Detroit to China.

And what kind of job would that be, you may ask?

Perhaps one writing instruction manuals that people can actually understand.

Who knows? But whatever it is, she has a job that none of China's one billion inhabitants can do.

OK, so it's a plot that might fold under questioning, but like a dedicated and disciplined martial arts student you have to stick with it. After another rubbish day at Chinese primary school, Dre makes an enemy of the class bully, Cheng, and he quickly finds that his limited Karate repertoire is inadequate. Also, he has never learned the age old Hollywood rule, to never pick a fight with anybody called 'Khan', 'Cong', or anything sounding remotely oriental.

With no real friends to help him, he turns to lowly maintenance man Mr. Han, who – like most Chinese, happens to be a master of Kung Fu and pretty handy with a gas boiler. Han teaches him the true art of fighting and of courage and dignity. Now Dre must face a showdown with the school bullies who seem to have learned Kung Fu from inferior maintenance men – why else would they attack one at a time?

positive community experience."

Ealdham star Esra Kilic said: "Winning came as a real bonus because we came along to the event to have fun and take part. Our school puts great importance on fitness and exercise."

Year 5 teacher Ian McManus added: "All the children had a great afternoon and loved playing against the other schools. From my point of view as the teacher it was fantastic to see the teams competing with the right spirit."

"All the children shaking hands after every game was great to see. I'm really proud of all the Ealdham children who took part and those that came along to watch and support as well. The boys all thought that it was a great way to spend the afternoon and the event was brilliant."

The Ealdham team was: Brandon Lincoln-

Grey, Tom Lindsay, Alfie Martin, Bailey Sells, Kea Al-Shaibi, Esra Kilic, Jordan Venables

Coaching staff from Charlton Athletic were on hand to run the tournaments and people all over Greenwich contributed to make the day special. The local Co-op store provided fruit and water for half time refreshments.

Residents from Age Concern had a great day out supporting the kids from the touchlines. The Tudor Barn restaurant provided funding for the trophies and medals and presented them to the two winning teams at the end of the day.

And there was PCSO Steve, the friendly police mascot, to provide sideline entertainment with the teams shooting penalties against him.

To promote the idea of walking to school, members of the local Safer Neighbourhoods Team assisted staff and pupils from each school in walking to the venue.

Loan star Kyel signs for Addicks

CHARLTON manager Phil Parkinson has made former loan star Kyel Reid his fourth new signing of the summer. Pacy winger Reid, who impressed on the left flank during a loan spell in the second half of last season, has been recruited on a free transfer from Sheffield United.

Parkinson said: "We're delighted Kyel has agreed to join us. We've been working on the transfer throughout the summer, and it's great to get it done. He's an out-and-out winger, and it's an important signing."

"Kyel did well when he was with us last season, and I also believe he's the type of player who will benefit from a good run of games. I know he also had offers from Championship clubs, so I know he's ready for the challenge."

Phil added: "Kyel is our fourth signing so far, and we're pleased with the players we have brought in. But we're still working hard to bring in more players." Reid bagged four goals in 17 league appearances for the Addicks last term, notching against Yeovil Town, Southend United, Huddersfield Town and Exeter City, with Charlton never suffering defeat when the winger found the net. He returned to Bramall Lane but the Addicks acted swiftly to clinch his signature following his release by the Blades.

Born in south London, Reid was a product of West Ham's academy system, making his full debut for the Irons under then boss Alan Pardew in a 1-0 away win over West Bromwich Albion in May, 2006.

The capture of Reid was confirmed soon after the Addicks announced that striker Izale McLeod had left the club by mutual consent. The club and the 26-year-old striker, who scored four times in 39 appearances in a three-season spell in SE7, have agreed to part ways. The forward featured 14 times for the Addicks last term, netting three goals, and a loan spell at Peterborough United was curtailed by injury.

The problem came four matches into his time in Posh colours, and McLeod's last Addicks outing came in the League One clash at Brighton & Hove Albion on December 1. Player of the year Christian Dailly has signed for another season. The experienced centre-half, who missed just two league games for the Addicks last term.

Parkinson said: "It's great news for the club, and we're very pleased to be able to extend Christian's contract for the forthcoming season. "We're in the middle of making some big changes, and it's important to keep some continuity in the squad, so Christian's experience will be invaluable. His influence on the team, on and off the pitch, was there for everyone to see last season, and it's an important signing for us."

Dailly, who will be beginning his 21st season in senior football next month, offers a wealth of experience on and off the field, and no Addick could better his tally of 44 league fixtures last season. The 36-year-old former Scotland international would have compiled a full house but for a bout of pneumonia around Christmas, and he clocked up 49 appearances in total. His only goal for the club was the very first strike of the season as he opened the scoring on his debut in a 3-2 win against Wycombe Wanderers on August 8.

Haimo and Ealdham top of the cops' tournament

by Peter Cordwell

TEAMS from four Eltham primary schools stuck to the laws of the game at a five-a-side football tournament organised by the local police Safer Neighbourhoods Teams on Blackheath Rugby Club's astroturf surface in Kidbrooke Lane.

The Superkidz charity, which provides activities for children on London estates, also had teams involved on an afternoon of high excitement that saw the Ealdham Sapphire class win the Year 5 event and Haimo take the Year 6 competition.

PC Steven Earl, from Eltham West Safer Neighbourhoods team, told GT: "We are always looking for new and innovative ways to engage with our community and this was a fantastic opportunity to work with local children in a less formal environment."

Haimo head Kate Barnes said: "Anel Domi, Mitchell Ralph and Zak Grice scored the goals as we won the final 3-1. We are extremely proud of all our children as they displayed all of the Olympic values that are so important in sport."

"It was a really enjoyable and

WELL BALANCED: action from the day
